Adam's Family

This is a tragedy.

A tragedy in the form of a photographic essay documenting the effects of labor camps.

Camps of immaterial labor.

The inmates of these labor camps are hands.

Laboring hands.

The hands were interned and became invisible with the advent of speculative capitalism.

Most documents of their disappearance have been destroyed.

But in some places you can still witness their remains.

The laboring invisible hands are commonly known as "Adam's Family".

They labor hard to develop the most efficient and unintrusive market control mechanisms.

While they ensure the unobstructed circulation of goods, they themselves are withheld from circulating.
